

The Merry Wives of Windsor: Throwdown! – Handout Sheet

Cut up the following lines and distribute one to each student. Have the students walk around the room saying the lines out loud and trying them with different intonations.

You damned epicurean rascal.

Leave your pribbles and prabbles.

How now, Mephistopheles?

Froth and scum, thou liest!

Vanish like a hailstone!

You have a little whey face.

You hodge-pudding, you bag of flax!

You lascivious turtle!

O, odious is your name!

You jealous wittily knave!

You are a Castalian King Urinal.

You peaking cornuto!

Hang you, dishonest varlet!

You shall die a flea's death.

You polecat, you runnion!

You have a world of vile ill-favoured faults.

You Banbury cheese!

You latten Bilbo!

Rogue, hence, avaunt!

Let vultures gripe thy guts!

You jackanapes!

Your guts are made of puddings.

You are a curtal dog.

Lord, Lord, you're a wanton!

You mechanical salt-butter rogue!

You scurvy jac-dog!

You jealous rotten bell-wether!

O, you panderly rascal.

You rag, you baggage!

You superstitious idle-headed eld!
